STEVARLABS / SAMPLE REPORT

Patient Journey Audit

How a new patient finds, judges and books your practice, and how well you keep existing patients coming back.

PRACTICE	Brightside Dental Practice (fictional example)
PRACTICE TYPE	Independent practice, 3 surgeries, market town
PREPARED BY	Stevarlabs
REVIEWED	Website, Google Business Profile, patient follow-up, first impression

About this sample
This is an example of the report format you would receive. The practice is fictional and every figure is illustrative. Your own report would use your real data and a review of your actual site and profile.

Summary

Brightside has a good clinical reputation and a decent base of reviews. The problem is not quality, it is friction. Patients who want to book hit slow pages and a hidden booking button, and patients who are due back are never reminded. Most of the fixes below are low effort and can be done within a month.

AREA	SCORE	VERDICT
Website and booking path	5/10	Slow on mobile, booking button hard to find
Google Business Profile and local search	6/10	Solid reviews, thin and out-of-date profile
Patient follow-up	3/10	No recall reminders, no post-visit contact
First impression to a new patient	6/10	Trustworthy, but dated and unclear on fees

Your three biggest opportunities

1. Make booking effortless. A visible Book button on every page and a shorter booking path removes the biggest leak between interest and appointment.
2. Stop relying on patients to remember. An automatic recall sequence brings back overdue patients who simply forgot or put it off.
3. Turn happy patients into proof. A review request after every visit, plus replies to every review, strengthens your local ranking and reassures new patients.

1. Your website: speed, mobile and booking path

Most patients look you up on their phone. We tested the site as a new patient would.

FIX NOW

Slow on mobile

WHAT WE FOUND The homepage takes about 5.8 seconds to become usable on a typical 4G connection. Large uncompressed photos are the main cause.

WHY IT MATTERS People leave slow pages before they ever see your phone number or your booking button.

THE FIX Compress and resize images, serve modern formats, and remove unused scripts. Target under 3 seconds.

FIX NOW

Booking takes too many steps

WHAT WE FOUND Online booking is a text link in the footer. From the homepage it takes four taps and a phone prompt to request an appointment.

WHY IT MATTERS Every extra step loses people who were ready to book.

THE FIX Add a Book button that stays visible as people scroll, and shorten the form to name, phone and preferred time.

SOON

Fees and what to expect are missing

WHAT WE FOUND There is no page showing typical costs for a check-up, hygiene visit or emergency appointment.

WHY IT MATTERS People who cannot see prices often assume the worst, or keep searching and book somewhere that is clearer.

THE FIX Add a simple "Fees and what to expect" page with starting prices and what a first visit involves.

WORKING

What the site already does well

WHAT WE FOUND Opening hours are clear, clinician photos are friendly, and a privacy notice and cookie banner are in place.

WHY IT MATTERS These build trust and are worth keeping as you improve the rest.

2. Google Business Profile and local search

For "dentist near me" searches, your profile often matters more than your website.

SOON

Strong reviews, but they have gone quiet

WHAT WE FOUND 41 reviews averaging 4.6 stars. The most recent review is five months old, and about 60% of reviews have no reply.

WHY IT MATTERS Fresh reviews and visible replies show a practice that is active and cares. Stale profiles lose ground to competitors.

THE FIX Ask every happy patient for a review straight after their visit, and reply to every review within 48 hours.

SOON

Thin profile

WHAT WE FOUND Only six photos (some years old), no services listed, an empty Q&A; section, and no secondary category for emergency appointments.

WHY IT MATTERS A complete profile gives Google more to match to searches and gives patients answers without needing to call.

THE FIX Add recent photos of the team and surgeries, list every service, answer common questions, and add relevant categories.

FIX NOW

Not winning the local map results

WHAT WE FOUND For "dentist near me" in its own town, the practice appeared around fourth or fifth in the map results.

WHY IT MATTERS The top few map results get most of the clicks and calls.

THE FIX The fixes above (reviews, complete profile, consistent name, address and phone everywhere) are the biggest levers.

WORKING

Accurate basics

WHAT WE FOUND Name, address, phone number and opening hours are correct and match the website.

WHY IT MATTERS Consistency is one of the signals Google uses to trust a listing.

3. Patient follow-up

This is the lowest score and the quickest win. Winning back existing patients costs far less than finding new ones.

FIX NOW

No recall reminders

WHAT WE FOUND Patients due a check-up receive nothing unless they remember to call. There is no message sequence for overdue patients.

WHY IT MATTERS Many patients are not avoiding you, they simply forgot. Without a nudge they drift away or go elsewhere.

THE FIX Set up a short, personal recall sequence: first reminder, a follow-up after a few days, a gentle message for lapsed patients, and a polite final nudge.

FIX NOW

Missed calls and enquiries wait too long

WHAT WE FOUND Web enquiries were answered the next working day, and missed calls were not followed up by text.

WHY IT MATTERS A person who enquires usually contacts several practices. The first helpful reply often wins the booking.

THE FIX Send an automatic text after a missed call and aim to answer enquiries the same day.

SOON

Nothing after the appointment

WHAT WE FOUND No thank-you, no aftercare message, and no review request after treatment.

WHY IT MATTERS The hours after a visit are when patients feel most positive, which is the best moment to ask for a review.

THE FIX Send a short thank-you the same day, with a review link for patients who have agreed to receive it.

A note on consent

Messages about a patient's own care are generally treated differently from promotional messages. Review requests and offers need clear consent. We build this into every sequence we set up.

4. How the practice appears to a new patient

We searched for the practice the way a nervous first-time patient would.

SOON

Trustworthy, but the site looks dated

WHAT WE FOUND Reviews and clinician photos build trust, but the design feels several years old and the opening screen does not say who the practice is for.

WHY IT MATTERS New patients judge quickly. A dated look can make a good practice seem less modern than it is.

THE FIX A clear headline, a friendly team photo, and a visible Book button above the fold would change the first impression at low cost.

SOON

Nothing for anxious patients

WHAT WE FOUND There is no page or message that speaks to people who are nervous about visiting the dentist.

WHY IT MATTERS Dental anxiety is a common reason people delay booking. Reassurance is a real reason to choose one practice over another.

THE FIX Add a short "Nervous about the dentist?" page explaining how you help, and mention it in your Google profile.

Prioritised fixes

Ordered by impact against effort. Start at the top.

#	FIX	IMPACT	EFFORT	WHEN
1	Sticky Book button and shorter booking form	High	Low	Week 1
2	Compress images, speed up mobile	High	Low	Week 1
3	Complete the Google profile (photos, services, Q&A;)	Medium	Low	Week 1
4	Recall sequence for due and overdue patients	High	Low	Week 2
5	Review request after visits, reply to all reviews	High	Low	Week 2
6	Missed-call text and same-day enquiry replies	Medium	Low	Week 3
7	Fees page and nervous-patient page	Medium	Medium	Weeks 3-4
8	Website design refresh	Medium	High	Later

How you would know it is working

- Online booking requests per week from the website
- Reply and booking rate from recall messages
- New Google reviews per month and your average rating
- Overdue patients brought back each month

What happens next

Request your own audit and we will confirm receipt, review your site, profile and follow-up, then send a report like this one. We will offer a short call to walk through it, only if you want one. There is no obligation to hire us.
